

LIFE EVENTS CHECKLIST SERIES: PLANNING FOR COLLEGE

Educating your family

Planning for a child’s or grandchild’s college education will rightfully focus on its considerable costs. However, involving your student in the planning/preparation process well before you drop them off can help them make the most both of their college years and your family’s financial commitment to them.

THE EARLY YEARS

Start saving

Tuition costs go up every year, at public and private colleges alike. If the current 6%¹ annual rate of increase holds, total tuition, room and board expenses for a child born today will top $500,000. Early planning can help make college financing more efficient and angst free.

Understand the savings vehicles

Decisions regarding how much money to set aside for future college expenses and which savings vehicle to choose vary from family to family. The age of your student may also be a factor. For example: If your student is already college age, you may want to make tuition payments directly to the school. (See chart.) Below are the principal choices. Your J.P. Morgan team can help you evaluate your options:

Introduce budgeting basics

Teaching your student budgeting basics can start in grade school and evolve into more sophisticated wealth management practices over time. For help diving into key topics, ask your J.P. Morgan team for a copy of our Children and Wealth Workbook.

THE TEENAGE YEARS

Focus on smart financial habits

As your student gains more freedom and financial responsibility, continue building a foundation of smart financial habits that will bear fruit well into their adult years. With learning to drive and first jobs, many students are making decisions with meaningful financial impacts for the first time. In particular, helping them understand their expenses can encourage an appreciation for your/the family's financial commitment to them—and aid their understanding of what it will take to support themselves after they finish school.

Articulate your expectations

Will you pay for everything? Do you expect your student to cover some costs? Must they maintain a certain grade-point average or level of community/family involvement? Do you expect them to be financially self-sufficient immediately upon graduation? Articulating your expectations—and discussing the true costs of a college education—well in advance of your student heading to school can help all parties get on the same page.

Communicate your funding policy

If you're paying tuition (or covering major expenses) for several family members, developing a uniform funding policy may be helpful. Spelling out in advance what you will cover, for what period of time, and detailing other expectations/requirements can help everyone accept the process as fair, even if individual outcomes vary.

Open checking and savings accounts

Taking responsibility for one's cashflow is a key milestone on the road to adulthood. Setting up checking and savings accounts for your student to manage while they are still living at home can help them learn to flex their financial muscles with your supervision.

SUMMER BEFORE COLLEGE

Draw up a college contract

Consider drawing up a college contract that clearly states each involved party's responsibilities, expectations and goals for the years your student will be in school. This can help bring everyone to the same side of the table.

Get basic legal documents signed

Paying your student's tuition does not necessarily mean you have the legal right to gather information on their behalf or make healthcare decisions for them. Before your student heads for school, discuss and have drawn up for them, depending on their age, basic legal documents, including a Power of Attorney, Healthcare Agent and HIPPA forms.

Begin an investment dialogue

Time is one of the greatest assets a young person has: Introduce them to the power of compounding, and the multiple benefits of saving and investing early and often—for example, using their own wages and/or holiday and birthday gifts they receive from family and friends. Your J.P. Morgan team can help guide these conversations with age-appropriate suggestions.

Start building credit

Learning to use credit wisely can set a young adult on the road to financial flexibility later in life. As a starting point, limit their credit card purchases to expenses that are predictable (e.g., gas, utilities, etc.) so they become accustomed to budgeting for and paying off the full balance every month.

WE CAN HELP

As you begin to make plans for the education of your family's next generation, know that your J.P. Morgan team is not only ready to help you prepare for funding that goal, but also to serve as a sounding board to move you closer to the future you want for your student, equipping them to make smart decisions in all aspects of their own financial life.

IMPORTANT INFORMATION ABOUT YOUR INVESTMENTS AND POTENTIAL CONFLICTS OF INTEREST

Conflicts of interest will arise whenever JPMorgan Chase Bank, N.A. or any of its affiliates (together, "J.P. Morgan") have an actual or perceived economic or other incentive in its management of our clients' portfolios to act in a way that benefits J.P. Morgan. Conflicts will result, for example (to the extent the following activities are permitted in your account): (1) when J.P. Morgan invests in an investment product, such as a mutual fund, structured product, separately managed account or hedge fund issued or managed by JPMorgan Chase Bank, N.A. or an affiliate, such as J.P. Morgan Investment Management Inc.; (2) when a J.P. Morgan entity obtains services, including trade execution and trade clearing, from an affiliate; (3) when J.P. Morgan receives payment as a result of purchasing an investment product for a client's account; or (4) when J.P. Morgan receives payment for providing services (including shareholder servicing, recordkeeping or custody) with respect to investment products purchased for a client's portfolio. Other conflicts will result because of relationships that J.P. Morgan has with other clients or when J.P. Morgan acts for its own account.

Investment strategies are selected from both J.P. Morgan and third-party asset managers and are subject to a review process by our manager research teams. From this pool of strategies, our portfolio construction teams select those strategies we believe fit our asset allocation goals and forward-looking views in order to meet the portfolio's investment objective.

As a general matter, we prefer J.P. Morgan managed strategies. We expect the proportion of J.P. Morgan managed strategies will be high (in fact, up to 100 percent) in strategies such as, for example, cash and high-quality fixed income, subject to applicable law and any account-specific considerations.

While our internally managed strategies generally align well with our forward-looking views, and we are familiar with the investment processes as well as the risk and compliance philosophy of the firm, it is important to note that J.P. Morgan receives more overall fees when internally managed strategies are included. We offer the option of choosing to exclude J.P. Morgan managed strategies (other than cash and liquidity products) in certain portfolios.

The Six Circles Funds are U.S.-registered mutual funds managed by J.P. Morgan and sub-advised by third parties. Although considered internally managed strategies, JPMC does not retain a fee for fund management or other fund services.
